

Skuld on bunker procurement

26th October 2021

Bunker represent the biggest single cost for the shipowners and charterers and effective bunker procurement management should start by selecting good bunker suppliers ensuring that ships receive the correct fuel quantity and quality. It is not always easy to check whether the purchased bunker is the same quality as the one being delivered, and bunker quality may differ around the world with different blending processes increasing the risk of contamination or low fuel quality, writes Dick Farrel Camoying, Technical Manager at Skuld in this publication on the Skuld website.

