

Shipping Still a Moving Target for Cyber Threats

By World Maritime News, 13th November 2017

The shipping industry is becoming ever more reliant on technology, making it increasingly vulnerable to cyber attacks. Protection from cyber threats is key and obtaining insurance for a company's assets in case of a cyber attack is one way of making sure ship owners or operators stay protected. In this interview with World Maritime News, IUMI's Secretary General Lars Lange discusses the numerous challenges related to cyber risk insurance:
